German Order of Battle – Elements of German Asia Division

Unit	Composition	Stands	Notes
Asia Division	Division HQ	1 x Division HQ Stand	Veteran
	Regiment HQ	1 x Regiment HQ Stand
	702 Battalion	4 x Infantry Stand 4 x MG Stands 1 x Cavalry Stand 1 x 7.7cm Mortar Stand	(1), (2)
	703 Battalion	4 x Infantry Stand 4 x MG Stands 1 x Cavalry Stand 1 x 7.7cm Mortar Stand
Artillery	702 Battery	1 x 10.5cm Howitzer Stand	(3)
	703 Battery	1 x 10.5cm Howitzer Stand

Notes:

- (1) Each Battalion consisted of three infantry companies and four MG stands (one per company and one for the battalion). However in this engagement there were two additional companies (One from the 11th Reserve Jager Battalion and one from 146th Regiment) and each Battalion has been allocated an extra infantry stand to reflect these additional troops.
- (2) Cavalry stands have AI5 and a range of 10” due to the mix of small arms and MGs with which the cavalry troop was equipped
- (3) Artillery is on table with AI4 to reflect the small number of guns used by the Battalions. They can however be brigaded to form a full strength battery. The number of fire missions has been cut to 5 (either as a single battery or brigaded) to reflect the smaller amount of ammunition carried by these smaller batteries.
- (4) The Germans launch their attack first. The Turkish troops can only arrive on table after a successful order change following the attempted capture or capture of any ANZAC entrenchment by the Germans. Order changes are rolled per regiment. This reflects the Turkish hesitation that occurred historically whilst taking part in this assault.
